

INAUGURAL HUMANISM DAY CONFERENCE

Wednesday, March 14, 2012

Dear Students, Faculty, Staff, and Friends,

In the midst of great technological change and drastic healthcare reform, modern medicine is at the same time returning to its core themes of humanism and personal relationship. The Healthcare Foundation Center for Humanism and Medicine at UMDNJ-New Jersey Medical School is sponsoring a full-day, student-run academic conference to explore these pertinent themes as they apply to the role of humanism in medical education. We warmly invite you to attend and present your ideas at this free conference on Wednesday, March 14, 2012, in Newark, New Jersey. Please see the attached brochure for more information and visit <http://bit.ly/humconference2012> to register. We hope you can join us to meet others passionate about humanism and discuss how we can all learn to become more humanistic practitioners of medicine.

Best wishes,

2012 Conference Planning Committee
