FRONTERA Border Health Research

FRONTERA Border Health Scholars (LAS 462/562) is a ten-week summer research course at the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center, based out of Tucson, Arizona. It provides participants with an increased understanding of public health inequities in the United-States Mexico border through role model mentoring, hands-on research training, and border health immersion activities. The course is open to both undergraduate and graduate students, and will run from the end of May to early August. An orientation will be held in the Spring semester to introduce students to the program and assign a mentor. Attendance is not required for non-residents; we will work individually with out-of-state students to assess the best research mentor to help explore their areas of interest.

Space is limited, so please contact us as soon as possible to register. For students who will be coming from out of town, we are happy to provide an estimate for anticipated costs while attending the program.
